Matton's Recommendations ton's report is meeting with much commendation from the press and the public. It is a very practical document and treats natters in a business like way. An anomaly When it costs as much to carry a letter from one block to another in e city as it does to carry the letter to San Francisco, Mr. Hatton thinks the time has arrived when the postage on local letters, at offices where the carrier system is in operation, can be reduced from two to afternoon at the Central Christian Church one cent. And, besides the gra a di-parity in that city. of price in proportion to service, he gives the very good reason that the local service in cities now pays over a million dollars a year in postage in excess of the cost of the E, T. Williams, pastor of the church, called He adds the further inducement that every new facility given to the local service increases the volume of its business. d we may add that while this pays the matter of revenue, it also carries out one of help and promoter of inter course among the people.

rule "anderpaid," especially at the "sepa rating offices." It is a fact that these clerks are very materially underpaid and we may repeat here what has said from competent been dge on the subject, that they are the hardest worked and least paid o the Government employes; certainly this is the case as to employes contributing the same class of service and incuring similar responsibilities. Of the other class of subordinates, those in the Department at heads of the divisions, Mr. Hatton speak in terms of deserved and just commends tion-at least it is just as to many of them. Of these Mr. Hatton says:

have opinions of their own and freely ex press them, without stopping to first con der whether or not the opinions they hon estly entertain are those of their superior officers, are the class of officers from whom a superior gets his best and most valuable stance. It is from such subordinate that the head of any office gets the mos cheerful acquiescence when he assumes th responsibility of final decision which the law places upon him." Commenting on the feature in the repor which states that the removals and sus pensions of officers were fewer in the preceding year, an exchange says it is doubly gratifying as there were comparatively fev in that year preceding. In no previous year the First Assistant believes, have there seen fewer complaints of incompetency nesty among postmasters. All this is very cheerful news to hear; and taking it in its proper connection with other news we have from another Department, civil service reform is already at work. The news from the other Department referred to is to the effect, that while there used to faithful service.
